

Understanding Allergens

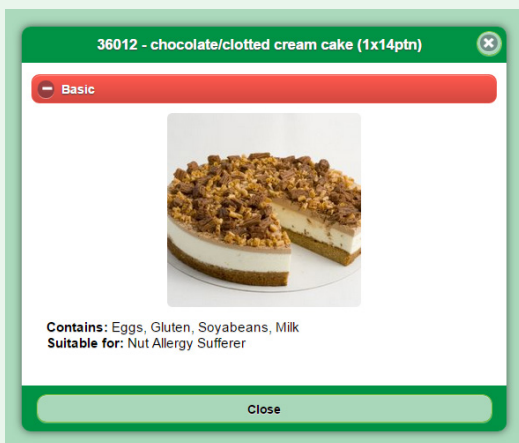

We are fully committed to supporting our customers in implementing and complying with the new food information for consumers regulation. From 13th December 2014 everyone in the food supply chain has a responsibility to communicate any of the 14 allergens used in the ingredients of the meals they prepare and serve to their customers; the guidance refers to restaurants, cafes, fast food outlets, delicatessens, butchers, bakeries, care homes, schools, colleges, universities and all other types of caterers. The 14 allergens are: Peanuts, Nuts, Gluten, Milk, Sesame, Soy/Soya, Molluscs, Sulphur Dioxide (Sulphites), Mustard, Celery, Fish, Lupin, Crustaceans & Egg.

Food businesses must clearly display allergen information on their menus or clearly advertise where it can be found. If the information is not on the menu there must be a "statement" as to where the information can be obtained e.g. recipe folder, website or by asking a member of staff. It is therefore vital that members of staff are trained and informed about this legislation and the 14 allergens.
